Carried to her brother, and also took care of her father-in-law several years prior to his death. She reared a step-daughter for 16 years and took care of an invalid brother, Samuel, for 60 years, until his death. Her children include Mrs. Theodore (Elizabeth) Fasperson, Mrs. George (Annie) Fisher, Mrs. H. R. (Nora) Read, Mrs. Walter (Phyllis) O'Toole, Vilate McMullan, and William, Daniel, George and Carroll McMullan.

While William had left, White soon his mission he kept a diary. In looking over his diary it was found that he fasted this many times. He kept this fasting from one day to eighty-eight hours, only lacking eight hours of being four days. During his fasts he asked the Lord to please heal him of the wasting disease he was afflicted with, so that he might finish his mission. He wrote to President Snow to ask him to please offer a prayer for him, even though he had the players of the Elders in the field.

The was gone 22 months, and during his last year he presided over the Scottish Mission. He returned home after he received a six years. He died March 18, 1904, leaving one year of his trustees' term un-filled. However, his eldest daughter, Bille- Beech, completed the term.

On his return home he was elected county treasurer of Westerhampstead, Hertfordshire, Eng- land, the eleventh and youngest child of George and Elizabeth Bailey Colemann. Her parents joined the LDS Church in 1844, immigrating with their family in 1847, and settled in Midway, with the family first settled in Midway, with brother, Henry Colemann, and later home-adapted a farm in Holladay, Salt Lake County. Annie remained in Salt Lake 17 years, until her marriage to William in 1880, when William was called to the mission and in Great Britain. Annie remained at home caring for her husband and four sons. She operated a small grocery store to provide a living for the family. While her husband was in the mission laboring with a young missionary, Elder O. McKay, who later became president of the LDS Church.

to Utah in 1863. It wasn't until two years later that William and Ephraim came to the United States and drove two yoke of oxen across the plains. The boys traveled with a company. On reaching Utah, William helped his father in the blacksmith shop. He also fought in the Blackhawk War in 1865 as a volunteer member. While still a young man, he formed the first library in Heber City.

On November 15, 1875, he married Mary Carter Clotworthy of Heber, a sister of Tom Clotworthy, but on January 1, 1879, she died at the birth of her third child, Margaret. Jean and Hugh were the other two children. On November 25, 1880, he married Anna Colleman in the Bideowment House at Salt Lake City. Although Anna Colleman lived in Salt Lake at the time of her marriage, she was born in England. Five girls and four boys were born to them.

After William McMullan moved to Heber City, he worked in the LDS Church a great deal and was superintendent of the Sunday School 18 years. During this time he was also president of the YMIA and president of the ward teachers.

The fact that he was called all over the country to administer to the sick showed he had the faith of the people.

He worked all day long in his blacksmith shop and sometimes stayed late to finish work that he had to do. Not only did he stay up for his own work, but would also administer to the sick or go with Bishop Duke to visit the poor. Though he did work hard and served his customers well, his ledger is still full of unpaid accounts. These long hours and excessive use of the left arm caused a wasting of the muscles. It never entered into his mind that he should use a little judgment concerning how much his body could stand. After he had had trouble for two years with his arm, the doctor told him to take a much-needed rest. George Reynolds, general superintendent of Sunday Schools, happened to be in Heber during William McMullan's confinement from the job of a blacksmith.

On August 11, 1896, he was called on a mission to Scotland, leaving his wife with eight children. Carl, the youngest, was born in Liverpool, Mr. Reynolds suggested that a son named William. Since he had never come to see his mother during this time, he had trouble for two years with his arm, the doctor told him to take a much-needed rest.
